Reasons for Allowance

1. Claims 1, 5-24, 26-33 and 40-56 are considered allowable since when reading the claims in light of the specification (MPEP § 211.01), none of the references of record alone or in combination disclose or suggest the combination of limitations specified in independent claims 1, 26, 40, 48, 50, 51, 52, 53 and 56 including “patterns” (supported at e. g., ¶ 0003), “time-stamped event instances” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0002), “sequences” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0003), “occurrences of disjoints” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0014), “maximum cardinality of disjoint occurrences” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0019), “expected quantity of distinct occurrences” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0022), “surprise pattern” (supported at e. g. ¶ 0018) wherein a data mining task (abstract associated with computer) is performed to develop sequential patterns among events (e. g. “... an Engine Oil event followed by an Automatic Flight event in one to three days. this pattern can be interpreted as a sequential rule such as: If an Engine Oil event occurs within one to three days, an Automatic flight event will occur.” ¶ 0007).

The closest prior art (Mannila et al., Discovering generalized episodes using minimal occurrences) teaches use of minimal occurrences of episodes that allows evaluation of confidences of a wide variety of rules using only a single analysis pass. An alternative prior art (Chakrabarti et al., USPN 6,189,005) teaches mining surprise temporal patterns of itemsets in transactions where support for the temporal pattern changes over time. However, inter alia, neither Mannila nor Chakrabarti teach “calculating a lower bound and an upper bound of a mean of the expected quantity of distinct occurrences of the pattern” or “identifying the surprise pattern as a function of the estimated quantity of distinct occurrences and the maximum cardinality.”

2. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”
